

Jessica Sullivan

Jessica Sullivan is a Coordinator II focusing on secondary literacy for the Division of Curriculum and Instructional Services at the Los Angeles County Office of Education. She works with educators throughout Los Angeles County's 81 school districts and beyond in implementing effective literacy practices and building systems to support them. A middle school educator at heart, Jessica has extensive experience teaching secondary English, providing instructional coaching, and implementing Tier 2 and 3 intervention for struggling older readers. Most recently, she helped to develop and host the Getting Reading Right: Filling in the Gaps in the Secondary Classroom and the CA Administrators' Reading Collaborative series. Jessica has served as a leader in designing and implementing district systems for structured literacy and for promoting explicit, differentiated instruction in secondary classrooms. She has expertise in curriculum and lesson design as well as professional development design and implementation.
